MISS MARTIN COMING FOR SUFFRAGE MEETING

SENATE CANDIDATE SPEAKS HERE

DO NOT SPEAK AT THEATRE

Both Will Reply to Bay State Senators Who Oppose Votes for Women

By ELIZABETH ELLAM.

Dudley Field Malone of New York, former third assistant Secretary of State and former collector of the port of New York, is to be the chief speaker at the mass meeting, planned by the Massachusetts Branch of the National Woman's party, to be held on Sunday afternoon, March 24, in the Park Square Theatre.

While Mr. Malone will be the big card of this important meeting, he will be forced to share honors with Miss Anne Martin candidate for the United States Senate from Nevada. Miss Martin is regarded as a most able advocate of the woman's cause, and interest in her appearance here on Sunday is increased by the fact that she appeared in Boston in 1913, when she worked for the Referendum. With Mr. Malone and Miss Martin will speak on the vital issue of the Federal amendment, the passage of which, through the Senate, is practically assured. As a most successful battle in the House, won by advocates of the amendment with a sweeping vote, the issue is now before the Senate. Massachusetts is regarded by the National Woman's party as the legitimate battleground for a red-hot ratification campaign, owing to the fact that both of Massachusetts' Senators, Lodge and Weeks, are on record as emphatically opposing the suffrage for women.

Women Ask Vote Only to Get Fair Start

By LOUISE R. SYKES.

Chairman of the Speakers' Bureau of the Massachusetts Branch of the National Woman's Party. THERE is only one question before the world to-day, and that is democracy. Everything else must wait. And that, not only because democracy must be settled, but because democracy must settle our national and international affairs. We see in the many how autocratic nations things. We see in Russia how anarchy settles them.

What is democracy? The best definition is American: Democracy is the "government of the people, by the people and for the people." And as the best definition of democracy is American, so also the best realization of democracy is American.

Two American institutions give us the right to make this claim. The first is the equal representation of the States in the Senate. Regardless of size or population, every State has two Senators, Nevada as many as Pennsylvania, Rhode Island no fewer than New York.

And so the basis of our great federation is equality of States.

Is not this what we are fighting for in the world to-day, a league of nations, which shall be, not a hierarchy of nations, but a community of nations, based again upon equality?

Our second great American institution is complete (legal, at least), universal suffrage. That entitles us to say that we have the right to our own political privileges, having only six privileges. We have got to far in the application of the principle of equality that we have political equality of male citizens.

Now, the world wants more than equality of States in America; it wants equality of States in the world. And America wants more than equality of male citizens; it wants equality of all citizens. The male citizen is waiting till Belgium and Serbia shall have the same chance as Austria or Germany, till women shall have the same opportunity as men.

Do Belgium and Serbia and Germany and Austria to consider their equals? Only in one sense—politically. Do women ask men to consider them their equals? Only in the same sense. In two countries, where we are about to open a new race, ask to be considered equals? Not at all. All they ask is an equal start. They must too the same line.

The political equal start is the vote; the star's line is drawn by each State and is called "qualification of the voter." But political equality consists in this, and in this alone, that anyone may enter ment in the workhouse at Oronoque. As a result, Colonel Thompson made a gift of $10,000 to the National Woman's party, or practically $100 for everyone of the ninety-seven women who suffered imprisonment.

The Court of Appeals, which has just handed down its decision that the arresting of pilots was illegal, has sustained Malone in his assertion that picketing was not a crime.

Men and women who are interested in the woman movement, and who are in the front of approaching destiny, will fill the Park Square Theatre on Sunday, next to hear the two speakers who are recognized to be the foremost of the nation in the National Woman's party cause.

CONFESSION OF GIRL ACCUSES DOCTOR

Arrest of Pawtucket Physician
Expected on Illegal Surgery Charge

Pawtucket, March 22.—The arrest of a prominent physician and accomplices, as well as the closing of a "retreat" where it is said illegal surgery is practiced, is looked for as the result of an investigation, it was learned today. The physician is said to have performed illegal surgery on a young woman employed at a prominent institution in Providence at his Pawtucket retreat.

According to the investigator for the State Board of Health, the brother of the woman, who holds a responsible position in New York, was called to this city when his sister was considered in a critical condition and secured a confession, naming all in connection with the illegal surgery.

Another physician, Dr. R. L. Towle of Broadway, was called in and refused to enter the case unless the young woman told her story in every detail. This she is said to have done, with the result that City Solicitor James G. Conolly was called and the whole story placed before him.

"I can say nothing at this time," said Conolly.

It is a fact that arrests are expected in the case yet to refer to, and to Dr. C. C. Richards, secretary of the State Board of Health.

Doctor Towle, one of the best-known practitioners in the city, said he did not care to discuss the question. "I will say, however," said the doctor, "that I was called to a house on Brook street and found a young woman suffering from illegal surgery. I refused to enter the case until she made a written confession, which she did, and which I now hold. I did that for my own protection. I would not take her pulse until she told her story in writing and signed it. Further than that I have nothing to say."

SAYS U. S. GOODS DISTRUSTED IN SOUTH AFRICA

Not Up to Sample—Warns
Americans They Must
Alter Methods

Suspicion, directed by the South African business man toward his American fellow tradesman, is hindering the progress of trade relations between the two countries, according to a report of the firm of Pienaar, Stein & Co., of Port Elizabeth, South Africa.

Mr. Pienaar, who is a member of one of the largest clubs, hides, wool and molar exporting houses in South Africa, recently arrived in this country on a self-imposed mission, the purpose of which is to improve the relations between the two countries, the merchant the necessity for greater consistency in his business relations with the South African merchant.

"The South African merchant," Mr. Pienaar explains, "is distrustful of the quality of goods for which the purchaser has paid more money than the goods are worth, and, when the goods arrive, they are not up to sample and, in quality, they are not up to the sample estimated."

There is an opportunity for reconciliation between the two countries, Mr. Pienaar says, if the American merchant is willing to grasp the situation and to improve himself, seemingly, because with American manufacturing facilities and a diversity of products when disposing of their finished products, the American merchants must establish trade relations with the South African merchant. The realization that such trade relations were too beneficial to be passed by.

"Some of the best wool in the world's market is produced in South Africa, as conditions there are ideal for sheep raising."

How I keep his little woollens soft
and sweet

BEFORE my baby came, the trained nurse had cautioned me: "Have all the tiny garments of the best quality and have only as many of each as you really need to keep your baby fresh and sweet. That is the actually important thing. Launder his things constantly. Never let one little garment stay soiled from one day to the next."

"From the very first I used Lux for them. It was so easy to whip the pure delicate Lux flakes into rich suds—so simple to squeeze the suds through the little garments—then take them out absolutely sweet and clean and fresh."

"The little woollens never shrank a thread—never stiffened or grew thick—not after repeated washings. And his precious little dresses were always so dainty and fresh as new."

See for yourself how the Lux way of washing—without rubbing keeps your baby's woollens soft and unshrunken. Your grocer, druggist or department store has Lux—Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass.

LUX
Won't shrink woollens

How to Wash Babies' Woollens

Use two tablespoonfuls of Lux to a gallon of water. Dissolve the Lux flakes in boiling or very hot water, and whisk into a thick lather. Put the little garments in and let them soak until the water has cooled enough for the hands to bear with comfort. Squeeze the suds through the garments. Do not rub. Rinse five times in clear water, hot as the water you washed the garments in; dissolve a little Lux in the last rinsing water, but do not beat into a lather.

This leaves the woollens softer and fluffier. Squeeze the water out. Do not dry in the shade, and press with a warm iron, never a hot one. A damp piece of cheese-cloth will prevent the iron from scorching or yellowing the garments. Wash colored woollens in lukewarm suds, and do not soak.

BLUE BIRD GAINS IN REALISM AS PHOTOPLAY

Reproduction of Masterlinck's Masterpiece Triumph of Film Art

By FRED J. McISAAC.
The story of the life of the blue bird, the play of happiness by the poet Masterlinck, with its symbolism and allegory which made it almost too highbrow for the spoken drama, has been done into a photoplay by the Artcraft Company, and was given a private showing at the Franklin Theatre yesterday.

YOUTHFUL LINES OF SILK DRESS ATTRACTIVE

A modified version of the Etton jacket style is seen in this charming tub silk dress in conservative navy blue and white checks, worn over a sheer waist of georgette crepe. Although the garment is modelled along quiet lines it suggests a rich simplicity that enhances its general attractiveness. The girle and ash relieve the dress of monotony. The garment lends a youthful charm to nearly any type figure.

BETTER THAN CALOMEL

Thousands Have Discovered Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets
Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a mild but sure laxative, and the lives almost instantaneous. They are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel. His olive tablets, brought out these little olive-colored tablets, the good that calomel does, but have no bad after effects. They do not hurt the teeth like strong liquids or calomel, and quickly correct it. Why help the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids. It is best not to take calomel, but to let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

SAVE YOUR HAIR AND BEAUTIFY IT WITH "DANDERINE"

Spend a few cents! Dandruff disappears and hair stops coming out.
Try this! Hair gets beautiful, wavy and thick in few moments.

If you care for heavy hair, that glazes with beauty and is radiant with life, has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine. Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, because it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff you cannot see, even, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scrub robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a fourfold and itching of the scalp; the hair roots become loosened and die; then the hair falls out fast.

PRESENT, TIME TO BUY AND USE GASOLINE

Plentiful Supply on Hand, Despite Reports Circulated to the Contrary

By C. F. DONNICKER. There are still concerns in the State who do not hesitate to misrepresent conditions which were made some time ago, or at least who are poorly informed over present conditions, that they send out circular letters to the public in general, spreading the report that there will be a shortage of gasoline and that consequently this is the time to buy. The following letter, in part, has been sent around in various members of the State.

"The latest report of the United States Bureau of Mines shows that the present consumption of gasoline for all purposes, and that for some months past refiners have been drawing upon a limited storage."

"With the growing demands of the season and the imminent of water transportation due to commandeered tankers, a scarcity of gasoline seems imminent and an advanced market is being sold at the highest price."

How Public Ownership and Operation of Street Railways by the People of San Francisco Has Worked

The one great argument which our public utility exploiters always make against the public ownership and operation of the public utilities—the railroads, the street railways, the gas and electric light companies—is the argument that with the present low state of political morals the public would be sure to operate the public utilities corruptly and wastefully.

Nobody ever thinks of proposing to put the public schools back into private hands where the education of the public used to be, or to return the streets and bridges to private owners and rebuild the toll gate houses so that every traveller on the street, either on foot or in a vehicle, would be obliged to pay toll charges every few miles as he used to be obliged to pay them. Nobody ever suggests that we return the care of our sewerage and the supply of our water to private hands, or the handling of our letters and our parcels post.

But the beneficiaries of private ownership and operation, who are, therefore, the natural enemies of public ownership and operation, always insist that political corruption will make the public ownership and operation of the railroads and street railways and gas and electric light companies dangerous and wasteful.

Nobody dares to assert that in Germany, Switzerland, Australia and the other progressive countries of the world political corruption has prevented the success of the public in operating the public utilities. Of course, the opponents of government ownership and operation answer every reference to the success of public ownership and operation of the public utilities in the great progressive countries of the world with the assertion, very solemnly and sorrowfully made, that public life in America is more corrupt than public life in the other nations. Well, if it is more corrupt, then it is because the American people have allowed these public utilities to remain in private hands longer than the people of the other countries have left their public utilities in private hands. Those gentlemen who have made, or want to make, great private fortunes out of the exploitation both of the investor and of the public through the private management of these public utilities are the very gentlemen who, with their predecessors in control of the same corporations, have been the cause of nearly all the corruption, and certainly all the dangerous corruption, in our public life.

Within the last decade the intelligent American people were aroused by the demonstration which Mr. Lincoln Steffens made that the corrupt political machines in every State and city of our Union were maintained and fed by big business, represented mostly by those who controlled the public service corporations. All over the country the same condition prevails. Crooked politics and crooked big business go into a secret partnership. Crooked politics agree to deliver to crooked big business the laws and the political protection required by crooked big business in its violation of law and in its general schemes of exploitation. Crooked big business agrees to supply crooked politics with the money necessary to maintain the political machines and to fight the political campaigns which will keep crooked politicians in office where they may deliver the goods to crooked business. Every well read, intelligent man, if he thinks at all, and is not afraid of being TOO RADICAL AND SOMEWHAT OUT OF FASHION (!) knows that the way to clean up politics, and drive the big crooked bosses out, is to drive out of the management of the public utilities these private managers who are supporting and maintaining crooked politics. PUBLIC OWNERSHIP AND OPERATION WILL BE THE LONGEST STEP IN THE DIRECTION OF PURIFYING OUR PUBLIC LIFE THAT EVER HAS BEEN OR EVER CAN BE TAKEN.

The whole country recalls the political history of the city of San Francisco a few years ago. We remember that it was one of the most corrupt cities in the Union. We remember that its Mayor was sent to jail; that the whole city and the whole State were convulsed by the evidence of graft which in San Francisco HAPPENED BY ACCIDENT to be discovered, but which probably existed in as gross a form in many other large cities of America.

A fearless public prosecutor, Francis J. Heney, pursued the trail of these corrupt politicians right to the door of big business in San Francisco. Indictments and criminal prosecutions followed, and the political boss of the city, one of the ablest men in the nation, was tried and convicted of corruption. Indictment after indictment of very detected corrupt politicians followed, and the trial was being higher and higher when Mr. Heney was shot and wounded in the court room.

The citizens of San Francisco arose, started a street railway of their own, and began to operate it. IT HAS BEEN A SUCCESS IN THIS AMERICAN CITY from the moment the public took control. Immediately the employees were granted an eight-hour day, though on the privately-owned street railway the employees were worked on an average of ten hours a day for seven days in a week. The private railway managers were paying their employees twenty-five cents an hour, but when the people went into the street railway business they immediately raised the pay of the men to thirty-seven and a half cents an hour, with time and a half for overtime. In 1917 the publicly-owned and operated line raised the wages of all its men once more, to a full rate of forty-three and three-quarters cents an hour, while the private lines, still operating in San Francisco, are now paying their men at the rate of thirty cents an hour, with a proviso that in six months it will go up to thirty-two cents and in six months more to thirty-five cents. Thus the public is paying its men eight and three-quarters cents more an hour than the private lines are paying their men in San Francisco.

The city has extended the lines, taking in deliberately some unprofitable territory in order to build it up and to relieve congestion, yet despite its extensions the publicly-owned STREET RAILWAY HAS PAID ON A FIVE-CENT FARE, and the service is so satisfactory and its financial status is so excellent that the people of San Francisco are proud of it and readily vote for its extension. There is no respectable body of public opinion against public ownership and operation of the street railways in San Francisco.

When the great exposition was given to San Francisco the privately-owned lines refused to extend to the fair grounds, except under onerous conditions, contending that the exposition business would be unprofitable. The location of the public lines was not so favorable for extension to the exposition, but the public lines were extended upon the judgment of the public that it was a good thing to give the visitors and the people of California the best possible service to the grounds. The business judgment of the people of San Francisco in making this extension was so overwhelming justified by the results that the unprogressiveness of the private lines became a matter of merit.

This is an example of a typical American city, and one which our private managerial purists certainly cannot claim to be less corrupt than American cities in general are said by them to be.

FINE AURORA OF MARCH CAUSED BY SUN?

By Garrett P. Serviss

MANY letters are coming about the wonderful display of the aurora borealis witnessed at least as far north as Washington on the night of March 7. The old question is revived: "What is the cause of the aurora?"

It is without doubt due to electrical charges taking place in the atmosphere, but the precise cause, or mechanism, of these discharges is not definitely known. Whenever there is a great aurora display in the sky the magnetic elements of the earth are affected, and a disturbance called a "magnetic storm," which has no necessary coincidence with ordinary atmospheric storms, causes interruption of telegraphic communication by varying the force of the earth currents. In such cases sparks sometimes leap from telegraphic instruments, and violent reversals of current occur. For some reason these effects seem to be confined to middle latitudes where aurora are seldom seen, while in the far north where they are of almost nightly occurrence the earth's magnetism is but little, if at all, affected.

Three Theories

There are three principal theories of the origin of the electrical discharges that produce the aurora. One of these, Hirtland's, assumes that they are due to radiating rays emanating from the sun. If this be so, then the aurora is a gigantic exhibition of electric discharges resembling those that take place in a highly exhausted glass-tube, such as "discharge tubes," or, in a yet more remarkable form, in a "Crookes tube," when an electric current is driven through. Another theory, that of Nordmann, suggests that the source of the auroral light is Hirtland's waves which, at a Hirtland's theory, are supposed to have come from the sun.

This would give the aurora a certain underlying relationship to wireless telegraphy, since it is Hirtland waves that are employed in the sending of the wireless signals. The third theory is that of Arhenius, who thinks that the cause of the aurora is to be found in negatively charged particles driven off from the sun and entering the earth's atmosphere, where they fall into the lines of force surrounding the magnetic poles, and produce an illumination. The arch of light seen in the north indicates the location of the magnetic pole of this hemisphere.

Sun Is Source

In every case the sun is looked upon as the ultimate source of the disturbance, and this accords with the well-established fact that aurora are most frequent during the periods when the sun is most spotted. This does not mean that a direct connection can be established between the outbreak of a particular spot on the sun and a great aurora display on the earth, but only that when the forces that produce spots are most active in the sun, aurora are most likely to be seen in our atmosphere. On a few occasions, however, there has seemed to be a direct relationship between a sudden visible disturbance on the sun, and a spectacular display of polar lights accompanied by a magnetic storm on our planet.

MILITARY DONTS AND WHYS FOR WOMEN

Men can't win this war without the help of women.

Don't confirm these old slanders: "Women talk too much"; "Women can't keep a secret."

Don't pass along any information that your own folk may carelessly or trustfully pass along to you.

Don't fail to report to the nearest officer disloyal or suspicious of anybody, native or foreign.

Don't forget that some of the most dangerous enemies of the country in time of war are native Americans of the greatest ability.

Don't forget that this war will end to our advantage only when it ends with victory.

Don't get discouraged. A short war and a happy peace may cost another war and greater loss of lives than closing up this war.

Don't let jealousy of other women whose men are at the front or are kept at home make you suspicious of motives or influences. The organizations and individuals are all parts of a complicated machine, each one must fit in its place and move when needed.

ALL REAPERS GLEAN JUST WHAT IS SOWN

By Mrs. Wilson Woodrow

BELOW I am giving the stories of three women, who, with the best intentions in the world, nevertheless deliberately widened the "little rift within the lute," until they successfully rendered the music of their own lives mute. Are you doing the same thing? These are true stories. This is the first:

His love for her was deep and sincere. She returned it. They were to have been married within a few months. All the time, however, in their lives pointed toward happiness. Their tastes and interests and likes and dislikes were the same. But they were of different temperaments.

He was quiet and self-contained, giving to music a good deal on his work and its various problems. She was demonstrative and enjoyed talking everything over. He liked this phase of her, but she did not like his silence and preoccupation. She failed to respect his music. She failed in sympathy and in the understanding of a nature unlike her own.

One day, half in jest, she said: "I don't believe you really love me." He hastened to assure her of his undying devotion. How could she doubt anything so rock-like? Soon afterward she again accused him of not caring for her. This time he was perplexed and pained. What was lacking in him, that he failed to make her completely happy? Why did she hold such an idea?

His Awakening

One day she made the often-repeated statement, and he did not reply. She looked into his eyes; they were those of a stranger. She had suggested the idea to him so constantly, that at last he believed it. She was perfectly correct; he did not love her.

They parted. She thought Fate was very cruel to her, but in reality she had been her own fate. She sowed the seeds so well that they took root and grew rapidly after the manner of seeds. She had no one to blame but herself.

This is the second story: A man had succeeded pretty well in business until a short time after he was married. He was perturbed, but not indignantly so; he had weathered storms before. His wife was not so philosophical. She insisted that the slump in their affairs was due entirely to his errors of judgment and lack of business sense.

He was a man of great energy and took occasion to point out to him all of his faults and weaknesses of character. She taunted him with his inability to provide properly for her.

The result was that he became harassed and worried, and lost his nerve, his grip on his affairs. Everything slipped away from him, and the outcome was just as she had predicted. He could provide neither a home nor a living for her.

Third Narrative

This is the third incident: A mother had a son who was inclined to be wayward. She was very ambitious for him, and in the hope of making him the star of his ways she constantly harangued him on the subject of his bad conduct and reproached him for ingratitude. His next transgressions were dragged up and rehearsed. The blackest prophecies were made in regard to his future. The picture of a disreputable career was held before him until he achieved it.

Finally he left home, and became associated with some one who saw the real good in him and endeavored to bring it out by praise and encouragement and by stimulating his ambition. There was a complete and lasting change in the boy. All he needed was the sunshine of approbation and appreciation.

And the moral of these three stories is that if it had seed can be thus sown and produce the results which we have all of us seen in our experience, the same is true of each one of us. Or, to change the metaphor, why destroy your nice lute and silence the beautiful music, just for the sake of picking your nails with your fingers into the rift and widening it?
